

Nominations Now Open

We are looking for examples of service user led projects from mental health, learning disability and autism services across the country that have made a difference at local or national level.

2022 is the 10th annual National Service User Awards and we'd like both staff and service users to nominate service user/resident led projects in the following categories...

Excellence in Co-Production

All projects and initiatives that involve a strong element of co-production either internally or externally to a service

Breaking down Barriers

Projects that tackle the stigma around mental health or raise awareness and educate people on mental health.

Recovery and the Arts

Creative projects that promote and support recovery including music, drama, art etc.

Health and Wellbeing

Projects that promote mental or physical health and wellbeing.

Outstanding Service User Leadership

This category recognises an individual or team that has made outstanding achievements in leadership and driving change.

The Mark Britton Service User Choice Award will return for 2022. The winner of this Award will be determined by a live service user vote during the Awards ceremony
